

Educational Theatre Programs presents... 'Acting on Stress'

'Acting on Stress' portrays real-life situations in today's classroom. From teacher workload and burnout to student apathy, lack of parental involvement and increased violence in schools, this performance covers it all. A facilitator guides the audience through the different scenes, providing feedback and explanations as it relates to their personal situations in the classroom. Since the production was introduced in 2000, 'Acting on Stress' has been presented to over 5,000 educators, parents and prospective teachers.

“As doctors, we see patients on a daily basis with problems caused by stress and recognize the dangers,” said Bruce Perry, MD, MPH, Kaiser Permanente of Georgia medical director. “We want to ensure our teachers are equipped with the skills to effectively manage their many demands.”

Show specifics:

- 'Acting on Stress' is a 1 hour show and requires 1 hour for set-up and 1 hour for break-down
- This production is recommended for adult professionals and educators
- A performance space of 20" x 20" and an electrical outlet is needed

For more information or to book a performance, contact Kaiser Permanente Educational Theatre Programs at (770) 496-3749.

Visit our website: xnet.kp.org/qa/etp/