

Narrative Medicine Anthology

The Permanente Journal

Storytelling in Medicine

This is a collection of pieces published over seven years in The Permanente Journal—a national, peer-reviewed journal of medical science, social science in medicine, and medical humanities—circulated in print to 30,000 individuals quarterly, and on the Web to 500,000 unique Web readers in 2007 from all 160 countries of the world.

This anthology presents several forms of narrative in medicine—essay, commentary, case study, journalism, stories, poems, journals, and research—that seek to make a point, explore the particular, gain perspective, or discover meaning in medicine more powerfully through relating a story than by exposition alone. Storytelling is an art of medicine.
